

Suggestions for a Washington's Birthday function

There is a single new idea anywhere for a Washington's birthday party, one that has not been done a hundred times. It is a party that is a very up to date hostess's idea. I have ransacked my brain for something new, and much to my disgust, nothing but the hackneyed tea and colonial dance, with the tiresome hatched and cocked hat as favors, present themselves to my imagination.

This particular hostess is unfortunately not alone in her search for original ways to entertain in honor of the memory of the Father of His Country. Originality is a mighty scarce article and one which when found is to be made a note of. Mr. Wagner in his "Simple Life" has said: "Novelty is the life of the party." The average Washington's birthday celebration is a splendid verification of this theory, but the twentieth century smart woman or man will have none of it and shuns the commonplace as deadly dull in spite of the French pastor's doctrine.

Here is a suggestion which is going into operation as a novelty function on the evening of the 22d of February. The affair may be arranged at short notice and nothing more in the way of expense is attached than the usual evening party demands.

This rare and radiant novelty is a "head party." This affair does sound rather gawky, certainly, and there is an unpleasant smack of the guillotine about it until an explanation is forthcoming. Despite its name, the "head party" is a very pretty and peaceful function, consisting of nothing more than a fancy party where the guests are asked to come with their hair arranged after the fashion of our forefathers and other countries at different periods of their sartorial existence. The rest of the costume is simply the ordinary evening dress of today. You have no idea how funny and grotesque persons look with a head of one period allied to a body of another. Great care must be taken that the women's gowns do not in any way detract from the predominance of the coiffure. The regulation evening clothes of the men make their "get up" easier, as there is no similarity in the coiffure of men and the wig of Beau Brummel. At the Washington birthday party the hostess will arrange her head as much after the Martha Washington style as possible, and the host will essay that of the dignified George himself. The guests have a wide coiffure field from which to choose. Hindoo ladies have queer and distinctive headgear, and the finery of the Norwegian peasant girls is pretty. German frauleins, stately Greek coils of hair with their charming veil draperies and the Persian women with alluring eyes peeping from their masked features are all wonderfully effective head effects. Then Japan and China furnish equally quaint coiffures, although a little difficult of attainment. When the era will admit, rouge, powder and patches are worn. The patches are always attractive and are cut into crescent and star shapes, and in the age in which they were worn the position of each dainty beautifier had a meaning. The head-dress of 1860 accompanied by a fascinating over-the-shoulder curl and black velvet ribbon about the throat makes a becoming selection.

When a verbal invitation is given for the "head party" the scheme should be explained to the prospective guest, and if cards are sent in one corner is written:

AT THE PARTY.

ten. "Coiffures arranged according to any period you may prefer, ordinary evening costumes to be worn with them." A too zealous guest at the party would spoil the effect by having a costume which harmonizes from head to foot.

To bring in some local color and a George Washington atmosphere, the room should be draped with American flags intertwined with those of France.

A picture of George and Martha would complete the decorations, with a bowl of red, white and blue flowers on the mantel as a patriotic emblem. The supper table would be lovely decorated with artificial cherry blossoms. Of course tradition will necessitate using the hatchet as a souvenir, but something novel even in this design is possible, for several hatchets are now combined in making attractive belt buckles for the girls, while the men might be able to stand the strain of wearing a hatchet pin for one evening.

After supper a stately minuet may be danced, which will be another Washington concession, but an always lovely and graceful measure when stepped with the right spirit.

For a child's party Washingtonian tableaux might be arranged with very little preparation; possibly a single rehearsal would be sufficient. Before making the costumes it would be well to get an illustrated copy of the "Life of Washington" and follow the designs shown in the pictures in inexpensive materials, such as paper muslin, canton flannel, tarleton and crape paper. The first tableau—the babyhood of Washington—should be shown with a room furnished in old fashioned style and lighted by candles. Besides a fireplace is drawn up a wooden cradle. In this will be placed a real baby if possible, or a baby doll dressed in nightgown and cap. The mother, in Mary Washington costume—full skirt, fichu and cap—will be seated rocking a cradle while she knits a stocking. It would be very effective to have some one sing behind the scene a pretty lullaby.

The next picture depicts the cherry tree episode. A small boy dressed in knee breeches, buckled shoes and a coat with brass buttons and cocked hat appears in this. In his hand he holds the memorable hatchet. A man, supposed to be his father, in Continental dress, holds the large branch of a cherry tree laden with crimson fruit. A tall man should be chosen for the part, as the contrast is more droll between the large man and the tiny boy, who looks into his face with the "I cannot tell a lie" expression.

"Washington's wooing" comes as a third picture. A lady with powdered wig, dressed in a gown made with full skirt, quaint cap and dainty fichu. It would be a high backed, old fashioned chair holding a fan coquettishly before her face. Washington, in full Continental uniform, kneels before her and clasps her hands.

Tableau 4 is the dreary scene at Valley Forge. A night scene in camp is shown. With boughs of trees sprinkled with cotton batting make a background, and, if possible, let fall small bits of white tissue paper to represent a snowstorm. Of course the lights are all dim. A group of soldiers, with Washington conspicuous among them, are standing in the center of the stage, while at the campfire other soldiers are warming their hands or cooking. Some patriot song should be sung during this tableau.

An exceedingly pretty picture is Washington's entry into New York. Washington is in this tableau mounted on a horse, with a footman at its head, while pretty girls in white are strewing flowers in his path. A wooden horse will do for this act; for instance, one that is used as a sign in front of a harness shop.

The last scene is "Peace." Washington is seated in a stately chair draped with the stars and stripes. On one side is a sailor and on the other a soldier, while behind him stands the goddess of Liberty holding a laurel wreath over his head.

The singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" ends the tableaux. Before each picture, if the children are not well up in the history of their country, some one could give a very brief outline of the event to be illustrated.

GRACE GRISCOM.

To Get Rid of Mice.

Make a mixture of cayenne pepper and finely powdered quicklime. Lay a little heap in front of their holes and with a pair of bellows blow the powder into them. This will drive the mice out of their holes. The mixture is dissolved in water and sprinkled on the shelves where food is kept with the pepper and lime. It does not kill the mice, but keeps them away.

VANILLA SOUFFLES.—Rub two level teaspoonfuls of cornstarch and four level teaspoonfuls of flour in a little cold milk. Pour this combination into a cupful of scalding milk and stir until it thickens. Add the beaten yolks of four eggs and a pinch of salt. Remove from the fire. Now beat the whites of the eggs stiff and stir them carefully into the hot mixture. Fill soufflé cups two-thirds full, stand them in a pan of hot water and bake in a quick oven.

Hickory Nut Ice Cream.—Found one pound of hickory nut meats in a mortar until they are a fine paste. Add to them a quart of cream and set aside until a custard is prepared from a pint of milk, three eggs and a cup of sugar. Keep stirring until it thickens so that it will not curdle. Take from the fire, add another cupful of sugar and set where it will cool. When quite cold add the cream, with the hickory nut meats, and freeze.

Marlborough Pudding.—Peel, core and cut in quarters six apples, steam them in a very little water until tender and rub them through a sieve. While hot add two level teaspoonfuls of butter. Let stand until cool, then add the yolks of two eggs well beaten, the rind and juice of one lemon, one cupful of sugar and a cup of cream. Flavor with sherry wine or nutmeg. Line two deep pie plates with good plain paste and fill with the mixture. Bake in a quick oven half an hour. Beat the whites of the eggs and add to them two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Heap this over the pies and brown slightly in the oven.

Jellied Banana Cream.—Remove the skin from four bananas, cut them in quarters and place in a double boiler with one cupful of milk. Cook until the bananas are tender, then rub them through a very fine strainer. Soak one tablespoonful of gelatin in one cupful of cream and put the milk and the bananas in an agate pan over the fire. Add the soaked gelatin and four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. When the gelatin is dissolved turn the mixture into a bowl to cool and add two tablespoonfuls of lemon extract. Pour into molds and set in a cold place.

Bright's Disease and Diabetes News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13, 1905.—To F. J. Hill Drug Company.

Dear Sirs:—As agents for the Fulton Compounds in Salt Lake there are some facts in the Call office in this City that should interest you and the editor of The Tribune as well as newspaper men generally. We copy now from a letter from Clifford House of the Call:

"That Bright's Disease and Diabetes are now curable it is well within the province of some of us in the Call office to know that it is true. Mr. Edward Short of this department, although given up by his physicians as a victim of Diabetes, got well. The mother of one of the editorial staff has also recovered from Diabetes. This was so conclusive that I told a friend, in Duluth, Minn., who has Bright's Disease. He recovered."

We will also add that ex-Supreme Judge Bigelow, in the Call building, is a late recovery.

Kindly call this important discovery to the attention of your people. Pamphlets herewith for all who ask.

Yours very truly,

The John J. Fulton Co.
